

A day in the life of a Case Foundations drilling superintendent

Written by Randy Post

Sunday, 22 January 2012 17:33 -

In this 2007 ENR article, a drilling superintendent from Case Foundation, Rob Jones, is profiled while his company works on the foundations for a Chicago highrise. As a geotechnical engineer who designs drilled shaft foundations, I found it very interesting to learn more about the guys on the construction end of drilled shafts. There is no question in my mind that those guys work a lot harder than I do. Source: [ACE Mentor Program . Image: ENR]